Description :

PDF-658df | At the end of the nineteenth century, Canadas prairies were still sparsely populated. Crimes such as horse theft, random murders, and prison escapes were the order of the day, and the North West Mounted Police continued to rely on their horses, their contacts, and their wits to apprehend the culprits. By the mid-1930s, a sea change in technology and police science had changed the game. Major advan... The Law and the Lawless: Frontier Justice on the Canadian Prairies 1896-1935 (Amazing Stories)
